Delta soars into Centennial year

Delta is celebrating its Centennial year. Having been a big part of aviation history, they've navigated the Great Depression, World War II, industry deregulation and the COVID pandemic. They've witnessed Amelia Earhart's transatlantic flight, humanity's moon landing and Concorde's promise to revolutionise air travel.

From humble beginnings as the first aerial crop-dusting company to inventing the hub-and-spoke system, transitioning from film to video in-flight entertainment, banning smoking onboard globally, offering a mobile baggage tracking system, purchasing an oil refinery and being the first major U.S. airline to introduce fast, free Wi-Fi, Delta has always been at the forefront of innovation.
